Introduction

1. Leadership Defined. FM 22-100: Army Leadership includes civilians as an integral part of Total Army doctrine. Doctrine defines leadership as "influencing people-by providing purpose, direction and motivation-while operating to accomplish the mission and improving the organization." The term influencing means getting people to do what you want them to do. Leaders of character and competence achieve excellence by developing a force that can fight and win the nation's wars and serve the common defense of the United States.
2. Commitment to Leader Development: The successful development of military and civilian leaders is key to the Army's success in peacetime and in combat. The Army recognized this early on and became the forerunner in the establishment of a progressive and sequential training common core to ensure military and civilian leaders are ready to meet these new challenges.
3. Purpose: As part of our commitment, this document was developed to provide supervisors and managers, in the South Central Region, with the most up-to-date procedures to apply for various leadership courses. This guide answers questions ranging from "What is the course and who may apply?" to "How do I apply". It covers all levels of employees (from new to SES). It also includes information on where to find training regulations, policies, and guidance. We hope you find it helpful when answering inquiries from your employees regarding leadership development.
4. Point of Contact: The Civilian Human Resources – South Central Region POC for questions regarding this guide and leadership courses is Ms Connie Stephens, 256.842.6664 (DSN 788), e-mail connie.stephens1@us.army.mil
